

"A feast of laughter" ★★★★★ RESTAURANT REVIEW

A Finger in the Dyke production

THE BASSENDEAN HOTEL 'STAGE BAR'

The Finger in the Dyke

By
Elaine Emm

Is an hilarious romp taking the modern phenomenon of the reality cooking shows with which our TV's are stuffed and prime ribbing them unmercifully. Jessica and Samantha own a restaurant; "The Finger in the Dyke". Despite Jessie's business smarts and Sam's passion for fashion food and strange recipes it is not doing well at all. They have volunteered to be filmed in a reality TV series 'Cliffords Cooking Catastrophies' fronted by Celebrity Iron Master Chef, Clifford Clifford. (So good they named him twice) Sam has the ability to generate love in everyone she meets, but has learned that her passion for cooking can only be matched by a true chef de l'amour.

Clifford's career as a celeb chef is fizzling out, his arrogance putting many of his audience off side.

Will he learn humility?

Will the crafty, ambitious TV producer get her way?

Will Clifford be back on the road to stardom at his soul mate's expense?

Will Jessie save her restaurant?

Will she be destined to dance her fantasy to bankruptcy?

Will her fascination with a particular Greek Island be her downfall?

Does anyone watch Gilligan's Island anymore?

This play takes aim at reality TV, the cult of Celebrity, the "Business of Entertainment" and social prejudice, hitting them all squarely in the face with a bucket full of parody
